

In many countries people working in sport and entertainment earn much more money than professionals like doctors, nurses and teachers. Why do you think this happens and do you consider it good or bad?

Nowadays, we can easily surf the Internet and find articles such as: a footballer had bought a new supercar which costs millions of dollars, or an actress had just re-married and the couples had moved to a luxury villa, etc. This information shows undeniable reality that sport players, actors, singers, models, etc. are jobs which are paid most money. Meanwhile, teachers, who spread knowledge and help develop human's characters, and doctors, who have been trained hardly to be able to take care of people's health, don't earn as so much money as sport players or people working in entertainment.

At first, I will explain why there is such a considerable inequality of income between two groups of career. Take a look at a famous singer: She has a beautiful voice which can attract the hearts of people. Day by day, more and more people want to see her and hear her singing, and they are ready to pay money for their delight. Consequently, the singer's income increases while her image is more widely known thanks to mass communication, especially TV and newspapers. Next, her job not only stops at singing, but also extends to advertising or acting, because many big companies want to familiarize customers with their products through her influence. Of course, these companies would not hesitate to pay a large amount of money in order to invite her to cooperate. Therefore, companies would gain benefits, the singer's image would be deepened more and her salary would not be a small number. That is also the typical way which actors, footballers or tennis players, etc. supplement their sources of income. And now, consider to an excellent teacher: although her reputation can be heard all over her country and she was also invited to teach at many places, there wouldn't have any food or fashion company want her to advertise for their products because her image is definitely not 'attractive'. So that the teacher or the doctor's income would not exceed the singer's.

Secondly, I think paying too much for people who work in sport and entertainment is not justified. The reason is: this thing would make youth concentrate on sport and entertainment industry more than science. Why is our world more convenient and connective like today, why did we have TV, radio or the internet for actors or singers to express their personality? All of these are based on the continually development of technology and medicine. Despite the necessity of sport and entertainment, but these activities hadn't been able to reach a new level without discover new knowledge. Furthermore, the prolonged success of a sport player or an actor doesn't depend only on his or her skill, but it was built from the combination of many factors, two of which is attached facilities' quality and the capability of instant treatment. Society need more engineers, doctors and workers to product much wealth, have people's health always taken care of and thereby achieve more modern life, and so these job need respecting and relivant payment to encourage people to follow. Relaxing activities can't be ignored because of their mental advantages. However, they are not the pivot part which create jumps of civilization.

In addition, I think we need to make more clearly about why artists can earn money from advertising and why companies are ready to pay much money for celebrities? Obviously, those companies have realize some potential products which many people are also willing to buy because of the improvement of their income. Having good standard of living like that, I'm sure that they have received good education and good medicine. Therefore, in order for celebrites to have very high salaries, the life of thousands of other people also be bettered simultaneously, and that's why we need more good teachers, good doctors as well as good engineers and good workers. People following these careers need salary deserving their works.

To sum up, I agree that this life can't be comfortable without either substance or mental conditions. The society can't have too many footballers or singer and actors; however they help life more lively and more optimistic. Professional jobs also play an important role and they need to be respected. Above all, to achieve steady and long development, social justice must be kept.

Revised

Nowadays, we can easily surf the Internet and find articles such as: a footballer ~~had~~ has bought a new supercar which costs millions of dollars, or an actress ~~had~~ has just re-married and the couples ~~had~~ has moved to a luxury villa, etc. This information shows the undeniable reality that sport players, actors, singers, models, etc. ~~are~~ have the jobs which ~~are~~ paid pay the most money. Meanwhile, teachers, who spread knowledge and help develop human's characters, and doctors, who have been trained ~~hardly~~ intensely to be able to take care of people's health, don't earn as so much money as sport players or people working in entertainment.

At first, I will explain why there is such a considerable inequality ~~if~~ in income between the two groups of career. Take a look at a famous singer: She has a beautiful voice which can attract the hearts of people. Day by day, more and more people want to see her and hear her singing, and they are ready to pay money for their delight. Consequently, the singer's income increases while her image is more widely known thanks to mass communication, especially TV and newspapers.

Next, her job does not only stops at singing, but also extends to advertising or acting, because many big companies want to familiarize customers with their products through her influence. Of course, these companies would not hesitate to pay a large amount of money in order to invite her to cooperate. Therefore, companies would gain benefits, the singer's image would be deepened more and her salary would not be a small number. That is also the typical way which actors, footballer or tennis players, etc. supplement their sources of income. And now, consider ~~to~~ being an excellent teacher: although her reputation can be heard all over her country and she ~~was~~ is also invited to teach at many places, there wouldn't ~~have~~ be any food or fashion company wanting her to advertise for their products because her image is definitely not 'attractive'. ~~So~~ so ~~that~~ the teacher or the doctor's income would not exceed the singer's.

Secondly, I think paying too much ~~for~~ to people who work in sport and entertainment is not justified. The reason is: this thing ~~would~~ could make youth concentrate on the sport and entertainment industry more than on science. Why is our world more convenient and connective ~~likeed~~ today? ~~why~~ Why ~~did~~ do we have TV, radio or the internet for actors or singers to express their personality? All of these are based on the ~~continually~~ continuing development of technology and medicine. Despite the necessity of sport and entertainment, ~~but~~ these activities hadn't been able to reach a new level without the discovery of new knowledge.

Furthermore, the prolonged success of a sport player or an actor doesn't depend only on his or her skill, but ~~it was~~ built from the combination of many factors, two of which ~~is are the~~ attached facilities' quality and the capability of instant treatment. Society needs more engineers, doctors and workers to produce ~~much~~ more wealth, have people's health always taken care of and thereby achieve more in modern life, and so these job need respecting and ~~relivant-relevant~~ payment to encourage people to follow. Relaxing activities can't be ignored because of their mental advantages. However, they are not the pivotal part which create jumps of civilization.

In addition, I think we need to make more clearly about why artists can earn money from advertising and why companies are ready to pay much money for celebrities? Obviously, those companies have to realize some potential products which many people are also willing to buy because of the improvement of their income. Having a good standard of living like that, I'm sure that they have received good education and good medicine. Therefore, in order for celebrities to have very high salaries, the ~~life-lives~~ of thousands of other people also must be bettered simultaneously, and that's why we need more good teachers, good doctors as well as good engineers and good workers. People following these careers need salaries ~~deserving-matching~~ their works.

To sum up, I agree that this life can't be comfortable without either substance or mental conditions. [direct trans.] The society can't have too many footballers or singer and actors; however they help life remain more lively and more optimistic. Professional jobs also play an important role and they need to be respected. Above all, to achieve steady and long development, social justice must be ~~kept-maintained~~.

Very nice essay. Only a few instances of unclear, direct trans. Little long for IELTS, but you know that...